"Race you, Hiccup!"

Astrid laughed as she took off with Stormfly, a smiling Hiccup trailing behind her on his dragon. They laughed as they tore through the puffy clouds, the cold air hitting them.

Smiling competitively, Astrid dived down and she touched the ground, Stormfly squaking.

"I won, Hiccup!" she yelled to the skies. What made her jump was a voice behind her saying, "No, mi'lady, I believe that I've won."

The Viking scowled as she stomped over to her boyfriend. "Shut up! You cheated! Cheater!"

Hiccup only laughed as Astrid raged on with her tantrum. They were 20 years old, but she often acted like a 5 year old when she lost a competition - especially when it was him.

After a few moments or so, Hiccup grabbed her arms and said softly, "Stay still."

"Don't you dare 'stay still' me, Haddock! You cheated, and its so unfair," Astrid pouted. Hiccup chuckled and pecked her lips. "Is that better?"

"No," Astrid whined. She wanted more than a peck to make her feel better.

He hugged her tight and kissed her forehead. "Better; is it good?" he asked her. "No," Astrid whined again. Hiccup then smiled mischievously and started tickling her. She chuckled a bit but slapped his hands away, "No!"

"Ok, then," he said. After a few moments of silence, he tackled her.

Astrid then laughed and, after a few moments of trying to pin each other, she was finally on top of him. "Does that feel better?"

"No."

"WHAT?!" Hiccup groaned. Astrid smiled before kissing him passionately, the kiss which Hiccup returned - obviously.

When she pulled away, she said, "Now I feel better."

Hiccup only rolled his eyes and pulled her closer. She buried her head in his neck.

After a few moments of silence, Hiccup asked, "Astrid, do you love me?"

"Of course I do, dummy!" she exclaimed, sat up, and smacked him on the head. "Ouch," Hiccup said, feigning a look of hurt. He pouted.

Astrid rolled her eyes and stood.

"Hey!"

"Hmm?" Astrid asked, whipping around to see a pouting Hiccup.

"I made you feel better!" he exclaimed, throwing his arms out for more emphasis.

"Your pout never bothered me," Astrid shrugged.

"Meanie," he murmured.

Astrid threw her head back in laughter. She walked over to him and kissed him once more. Hiccup smiled into the kiss and pulled her closer, and that action deepened their kiss.

When they pulled away, Astrid only smiled and said, "Well, I believe that made you feel better."

He nodded.

Smirking, Astrid ran to her dragon and shouted "Good, at least that worked."

Seeing her ride off, he only shook his head and chuckled. He trailed after her, both laughing once more. When they were side to side, Astrid asked, "You know I'll love you for infinity, right?"

The man nodded and asked, "Will you be my forever?"

"Oh, yes."
